Council backs tougher controls on bookies

by Dan Stephens

THE ROYAL borough is backing a move to reduce the stakes on casino-style betting machines where punters can place bets of £100 a time.

The council has joined a group of local authorities calling on all party leaders to restrict the stakes on fixed odds betting terminals (FOBTs) to just £2 - in line with other gaming machines on the high street.

A letter was sent to party leaders calling on them to make a commitment to limit the potentially harmful effects of certain gambling machines in their manifestoes.

It was sent ahead of an event last week hosted by the Campaign for Fairer Gambling, which discussed the impact of fixed odds betting terminals on the industry and players.

The royal borough has joined the largest ever coalition of authorities to

General election set for May 7th

RESIDENTS in the royal borough of Greenwich have until 20 April to register to vote for this May's General Election, with polling day itself taking place between 7am and 10pm on Thursday 7 May. Residents who haven't registered before need to apply to register in order to vote. Residents are encouraged to apply to become registered well before the deadline to ensure their application is processed, and their identity verified, in time for them to vote. People who are already registered don't need to reapply.

The council is also helping residents get registered to vote this spring and is writing to all residents this week with important information about the registration process, including notification of who is registered at your address.

Those registering are also reminded that the system has recently been amended, with voting age residents need to register individually – in past elections heads of the household could register everyone in the home at once.

There are also a series of additional deadlines for residents with different circumstances to be aware of. The deadline for applying for a postal vote is 5pm, Tuesday 21 April and those applying for a proxy vote have until 5pm on Tuesday 28 April.

Students become TV crew for the day

ON CAMERA: Phillip Wulforst interviews Cllr Sizwe James, the royal borough's cabinet member for business, employment and skills, filmed by Tony Lounge from Ravensbourne ASPIRING newshounds used the borough's prototype 'driverless car' as the main feature in a special report for the BBC.

Four students from the Greenwich University Technical College (UTC) in Woolwich Road filmed their special report for a BBC competition aimed at young reporters.

They used the Shuttle to compile a news-style video for the BBC competition which was open to young reporters across the country. They spoke about the ground-breaking vehicle, and interviewed members of the public and people involved in the project to find out about the benefits of driverless cars and how they will affect people's lives, both worldwide and in Greenwich.

Taking part were Phillip Wulforst as the interviewer, George Gosnell as the reporter, and Diana Alexandra and Kai Chapman as the technical crew.

The event was organised by Mine Miralay and Pooja Patel from the UTC's marketing team. Pooja said: "The students didn't have any time to practise or to go through their lines, so they used Q-cards. They put in a wonderful effort and they loved the entire thing."

The film editing is being done this week and the finished production will then be sent off to the BBC for judging.

● The borough's growing reputation as a 'Smart City' helped it to be selected as a trial site to test a driverless car. It was launched recently to the media on Greenwich Peninsula when the 'Meridian Shuttle' made its inaugural journey. Royal Greenwich is the local authority partner in the GATEway project, which stands for 'Greenwich Automated Transport Environment' - one of three projects chosen by the government to test automated vehicles in urban environments.

Stop-start hotel is back on track

WOOLWICH is to get its long-delayed new hotel in Beresford Street, years after the original plans were shelved.

Once complete, it will create up to 35 new jobs and provide 130 bedrooms.

The shell of the hotel was built several years ago. But then the site was abandoned when the owners, Key Homes Group, went into administration. The six-storey building has now been bought from the administrators by Berkeley Homes, which owns Royal Arsenal Riverside. The company is now looking to bring in a hotel operator to complete the scheme, bringing new business and jobs to the town.

Karl Whiteman, divisional managing director of Berkeley Homes (East Thames) said: "Local residents have had to put up with years of uncertainty over this building so we are delighted to have completed the purchase and be able to offer it a positive future. A new hotel is excellent news for Woolwich, creating around 35 new local jobs and boosting tourism and trade in this part of the Royal Borough of Greenwich.

"We will be working hard over the coming months to identify the right operator to ensure that it complements the new development at Royal Arsenal Riverside. We will keep the community updated on progress through the course of this year."

The hotel site forms part of Royal Arsenal Riverside, Berkeley Homes' £1.2 billion regeneration project where it is developing 5,000 new homes in 88 acres with restaurants, bars, shops and leisure facilities in historic conversions and new developments along the River Thames.

LAUNCH: A GT feature on the council campaign

Survivors united

THE council's high-profile campaign to tackle domestic violence in the borough stepped up a gear this week with a renewed focus on showing victims where to go for help – and reinforcing the message that abusers will not get away with it. It comes on the back of research which says major sporting events can often provoke an increase in violence in the home.

A team in a league of its own

THE council-funded Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT) based at Plumstead Police Station, provided an emergency response as well as follow-up support to victims in the borough. They direct victims to other organisations that can help them, and will also point those who commit violence to where they can get help. If they decide they want to change their ways, they can also get help. In January 2014, the DVIT received a grant of £100,000 to help it get started.

The away supporters

SUPPORT for the campaign to tackle domestic violence has come from some of the borough's most prominent figures. Members of the council, including Councillor Jackie Smith, have been seen at the launch of the campaign. The campaign is aimed at raising awareness of domestic violence and encouraging victims to seek help. It also aims to encourage the public to report any incidents of domestic violence to the police. The campaign is being run by the Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT) based at Plumstead Police Station.

Help is just a phone call away

CALLS to a domestic violence helpline have risen. The council has funded a specialist four-person police team at Plumstead Police Station, called the Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT). The team is available 24 hours a day to provide support to victims of domestic violence. The team can help victims to get a safety plan, a restraining order, or a divorce. They can also help victims to get a job, a house, or a new start in life.

Big boost to tackle domestic abuse

by Dick Townsend-Smith

A GOVERNMENT grant of £55,388 has been won by the council and Housing 4 Women to help support young victims of domestic abuse.

It follows a joint bid for funding and will be used by the housing support group to help children who are living in refuges.

The cash means the group will be able to take on a children's worker who will run group sessions and activities for 30 children, as well as provide one-to-one support, and work with schools and children's centres.

The cash is part of a £10 million government package to help support refugees across the country and boost provision for vulnerable victims of violence in the home.

Tackling domestic violence is one of the council top priorities. It has put up £600,000 to fund the campaign, and it is financing a specialist four-person police team at Plumstead Police Station, called the Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT).

Another £250,000 of funding was put up by the local NHS Clinical Commissioning Group to fund new initiatives to help reduce domestic violence.

The police, council, health authority, schools and support groups are working together to help victims – and get their attackers and abusers brought to court.

Jakki Moxham, chief executive at Housing 4 Women said: "Children are the hidden victims of domestic violence. They make up around two-thirds of the residents in refuges and are some of the most vulnerable children in our society. The appointment of a dedicated refuge children's worker will help those children who witness domestic abuse to go on and lead the fulfilling lives they deserve and help prevent them becoming future victims themselves."

Cllr Jackie Smith, the council's cabinet member for community safety and environment, said: "This grant is welcome news. It will help us in our campaign to protect both women and children who are affected by domestic abuse."

"If you feel you are at risk yourself, or you know someone else who you are worried could become a victim, don't hesitate to report it either to the police or to the Greenwich Domestic Violence and Abuse Service on 020 8317 8273."

Arts fund meetings

MORE than 100 people – parents and their children – went along to Charlton House on Tuesday February 17 for a free day of fun learning activities.

These included cake-making, painting, photography, guitar lessons, languages and stained-glass making.

"The most popular was making models of houses from lumps of clay and using stencils to decorate them," said Jodi Morris from Greenwich Community College's Marketing Department, which organised the event.

"It was a day of creativity and fun with family and friends and the chance to try your hand at a new skill in one of our taster sessions. On average people came with their children and stayed for about two hours. Charlton House is a great location, and people who were out walking in the park came in as well, on spec.

"We organised a similar event last year, but this year we wanted to focus on children coming with their parents, because it was a good way for us to talk to parents, and give us the opportunity to recruit new students."

Easter rail time table changes

EASTER engineering works on the railway will affect travelers in the royal borough next month.

As London Bridge, Cannon Street, Waterloo East and Charing Cross are closed over the whole Easter weekend, there will be no services on the Greenwich line, there will be services from Charlton and Blackheath to Blackfriars and Victoria.

Time to stub it out – for good

LAST Wednesday was national No Smoking Day (March 11) but there's still loads of advice, help and support available for anyone wanting to give up.

The borough's Healthy Living team can help you to quit, and a roadshow is now touring the borough giving out tips on how to make your home and your car smoke-free. They also offer a free lung and carbon monoxide test, and a free fire safety check.

Households where there is a smoker are 40 per cent more likely to have a house fire. The fire brigade is also offering fire prevention tips and free home safety checks as part of the campaign. For more information visit www.london-fire.gov.uk/HomeFireSafetyVisit

The local campaign is being run in partnership with Charlton Athletic Community Trust and the London Fire Brigade. The roadshows, which run until April 11, are at these locations and days, and run from 10am to 5pm each day:

Tuesdays, Eltham, Orangery Lane mobile unit

Wednesdays, Sainsbury's, Greenwich Peninsula

Thursdays, Abbey Wood Park

Fridays, Cherry Orchard

GIVE IT SOME PUFF: Clr Maureen O'Mara and local firemen at the launch of a Smokefree campaign earlier this year until March 20. Then at ASDA, Charlton, from March 27 to April 10

Saturdays, General Gordon Square, Woolwich (11am to 5pm).

One person who took the plunge and gave up successfully is Moira Heatherton from Blackheath. She got help to quit after visiting the roadshow two years ago.

At the time Moira took a 'lung age' test and was shocked when the result gave her an age which was older than her chronological age.

Moira recently spoke to Stop Smoking advisor Mark Bygraves at the mobile unit in Orangery Lane Eltham, where Mark invited her to do another lung age reading to see if her lung capacity had improved – and it had, dramatically.

Clr Maureen O'Mara, the council's cabinet member for community well-being and public health, said: "Smoking is a lose-lose situation for everyone involved. It is dangerous to your health, and increases the risk of fire considerably.

"Invisible toxins can stay in a room for several hours – to be inhaled by you, your family and friends, your children, and even your pets. Keeping your home and your car smoke-free not only protects the health of those you care about, but also makes them more pleasant places to be."

Council's website voted a three-star winner

STAR RATING : the home page of the council's website

A NATIONAL survey has given the council's website a three-star rating.

The verdict has come from the Society of IT Managers. It gives www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk three stars out of four.

This ranks Royal Greenwich in the top third of all UK council websites and the top third of all London borough websites. The borough also came second highest in the country for the proportion of local people who visit the website, at 36.87 per cent.

The review also praised Greenwich as an example of good practice for how to find out about local councillors, reporting faulty streetlights, information on free school meals, and finding out about breaks for carers.

The whole website was rated very good for accessibility for people with disabilities, and for its ease of use. The website search engine and A-Z guide to services were also highlighted as helpful to website visitors.

Clr Denise Hyland, leader of the council, said: "We are focusing on putting more services online to make it easier and quicker for residents to order services and contact the council. These results from the society confirm that what we are doing is working, so we are delighted to have confirmation that we are getting it right."

Raising the roof

Dedicated team tackles rogue landlords

A THOUSAND privately rented properties have been visited by a specialist team set up to crackdown on rogue landlords.

Launched last Spring, the royal borough's rogue landlord team is currently involved in 800 active investigations, served more than 100 improvement notices and has also started almost 30 legal prosecutions.

The team was set up to target rogue private landlords profiteering from letting unregulated, sub-standard and often dangerous properties including houses in multiple occupancy, unregulated or illegal hostels and other properties which may be poorly managed and in a bad condition.

Their visits have led to the identification of around 800 properties which could harm the health or safety of residents. Examples include fire alarms that don't work, unsecure window locks, and leaking roofs.

The team has been successful in exposing dangerous practices and making landlords accountable for the condition of their properties

Councillor Jackie Smith, cabinet member for community safety and environment said: "Our Rogue Landlord team has made hundreds of visits to ensure that tenants are protected from the small number of landlords who put their profits ahead of their legal responsibilities."

"At a time when private sector rents are so high, it's especially unacceptable for tenants to have to live in some of the poor, dangerous and often illegal conditions we have been seeing."

"We would urge anyone living in poor or dangerous private rented accommodation, or residents who are worried that a house on their street may be involved in exploiting tenants to contact the team today."

The London Fire Brigade are a key partner in the project which also tackles landlords renting properties lacking basic fire safety measures such as smoke alarms or fire doors. Borough fire commander Bob Selby added:

"We are able to support well intended landlords unsure of their obligations.

But also through, joint enforcement, apply more punitive measures to those who knowingly neglect the safety of their tenants."

The team works with private landlords to help them meet their legal obligations.

● Landlords and concerned tenants can contact the Rogue Landlords team on 020 8921 8157 or email residentialservices@royalgreenwich.gov.uk

Diamond wedding joy for Eltham couple

THE Queen has sent her personal congratulations to an Eltham Couple to celebrate their Diamond wedding anniversary. Dennis and Joyce Moffatt were married on February 6 in 1954 at Woolwich Town Hall, less than a year after the Queen's coronation. Dennis and Joyce first met when they were both 16 and have been happily married for 61 years. Their daughter contacted the Queen after the couple's 60th anniversary to let her know about the historic milestone and the official congratulations were sent just after their 61st anniversary.

Eltham MP Clive Efford, who was on hand to celebrate with the couple, said: "It really is a great honour to celebrate this wonderful occasion with Joyce and Dennis. I have known the couple for many years."

submit a Sustainable Communities Act (SCA) proposal on the issue.

Betting shop chains often cluster their stores together in order to evade the licensing restriction of four machines per store and such concentrations of betting shops are often associated with crime and anti-social behaviour.

Reducing the stakes on FOBTs, which are known as the "crack cocaine" of the industry, will help to curb betting shop clustering in the nation's high streets and help local areas become more economically sustainable and vibrant.

Greenwich Council has already demonstrated its commitment to greater regulation of betting shops and in 2013 voted to back a motion calling on the government to amend the planning process requiring betting shops to apply for planning permission to open.

Council leader Denise Hyland, said: "We are committed to limiting the extremely detrimental effects high-stakes FOBTs can have on both individuals and the local community. That is why we are joining a range of other authorities in submitting a SCA proposal and calling on party leaders to commit to tackling this issue."

"We are campaigning for a reduction in the stakes on these machines alongside additional licensing measures to help reverse the decline of high streets nationwide."

"We will continue to work to regulate betting shops and push for responsible gambling in order to protect vulnerable residents and safeguard local areas from the risk of deprivation."

"Winter Angels" urgently needed in Greenwich

Could you be a volunteer and spare some time to help a vulnerable person this winter

Age UK Bromley & Greenwich is looking for volunteers to help to provide companionship and support to older people over the winter period to help prevent unnecessary admissions to hospital and for those returning from hospital.

The role will involve visiting an older person in their home, over a period of six to twelve weeks, helping them with tasks such as shopping, collection of prescriptions, returning library books, meal preparation, accompanying them on short walks and other social outings. Volunteers will be needed at various times across daytimes, evenings and weekends to suit your availability.

Full training will be provided but volunteers will need good communication skills; an understanding and empathy with the needs of older people, particularly in respect of those who may have lost confidence or some of their mobility.

Contact: Age UK Bromley & Greenwich Community House, South Street, Bromley Kent, BR1 1RH or telephone 020 8315 1854 or email communityvolunteerstb@ageukbandg.org.uk

Foster carers family fortune

Fostered teens to get wider support

TEENAGERS who are fostered by the royal borough will get additional support from a wider network of carers after a successful bid for government funding.

Along with seven other local councils Royal Greenwich has teamed up with the national charity The Fostering Network to introduce the Mockingbird Family Model which has been shown to be a successful way to improve outcomes for children in care. Developed in the USA, the scheme uses the concept of a dedicated 'hub home' of specially recruited and trained carers. They provide respite care for foster carers, as well as peer support and social activities.

The scheme aims to work like an extended family, creating opportunities for families who live near one another to support each other, overcome problems before they escalate and offer children a more positive experience of care. The hub also builds links with other families and with a wider network of agencies who can provide young people with enhanced opportunities to learn, develop and succeed.

The approach is being pioneered for the first time in the UK following a £1.5m funding award from the Department for Education's Innovation Programme.

The focus in the first year will be on setting up new kinship and foster care networks for adolescents.

Cllr John Fahy, deputy leader of the royal borough and cabinet member for children's services, said: "I welcome this opportunity to be part of an innovative programme that will lead to more teenagers in our care having stable homes with Greenwich foster carers."

Melissa Green, director of operations at The Fostering Network, said: "Mockingbird is a simple, innovative and research informed approach to restructuring children's services with proven positive outcomes for children, carers and services. We believe it will inspire and engage fostering services across the UK with a new, intuitive approach to foster care."

Going the full cycle

by Dick Townsend-Smith

A NEW cycle shop which has just opened in Hare Street, Woolwich, is teaching customers how to service and repair their own bikes.

Lucky Brakes is a not-for-profit social enterprise, and is supported by the council.

Manager John Cox told GT: "Any money we make is put back into the business. We repair and restore bikes in our workshop, and run classes called 'Get to know your bike' on weekday evenings and Saturday lunchtimes.

"It's great to see people get stuck-in. We sell refurbished bikes and parts as well.

"For £15 a membership for a year, people can use our workshop and our

Charlton hosts campaign to protect vulnerable adults

THE centre circle at The Valley was the venue for the launch of a new campaign to raise awareness about the safety of vulnerable adults.

Representatives from local organisations that work with vulnerable adults stepped onto the pitch at half-time during a match earlier this month. They signed a pledge promising to work with the community to safeguard adults at risk and take action against adult abuse.

Signatories included the royal borough, Charlton Athletic Community Trust and Greenwich Action for Voluntary Services (GAVS). They teamed up to promote the work of the Greenwich Safeguarding Adults Board. Other organisations involved in that work include the local NHS, the Police, and local voluntary agencies.

Cllr David Gardner, the borough's cabinet member of health and adult social care, said: "The royal borough runs services for some of the most vulnerable people in the community. We place great emphasis on keeping those adults safe, and the support that we get from the Club and the Trust, as well as from other community groups and public bodies, is tremendously important, both in protecting vulnerable people from abuse, and in ensuring adults know where they Jane Lawson, independent chair of Greenwich Safeguarding Adults Board (SAB), said: "One of the common features of adult abuse is that it so often goes unseen. That's why campaigns like this one are so important, in raising awareness across the community of the responsibility we all have in taking action to protect those who are vulnerable."

The Trust runs a number of projects including Charlton Upbeats, a football

Anyone over 18 who is unable to protect themselves from injury or harm due to their age, illness or disability is considered vulnerable.

Adults can be at risk of abuse at work or college, or in hospital, residential homes, in public and even in their own homes.

Health and well being in the hot seat

ONE hundred and thirty people attended a health information event aimed at the borough's Nepalese community.

The event was organised by Greenwich Healthy Living as part of the council-led Stay Warm Stay Safe campaign, designed to encourage vulnerable and elderly residents to access support and advice over the winter months.

Hosted by the Clockhouse Community Centre, Woolwich, the morning's events included information stalls with details on quitting smoking, Cancer awareness, housing rights and how to report a crime. There was also help with action to take to stay warm in the home, tips on how to make homes less draughtily and reduce fuel bills. Visitors could get lifestyle health checks and a chance to take part in a health needs questionnaire. There was also information on the support available to help people stay active and visitors took part in a chair based exercise session.

Volunteer translators were on hand to interpret advice provided by advisers and help with over 80 health needs questionnaires.

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the cabinet member for public health and community wellbeing, said: "The event also aimed to encourage those attending to remain engaged and to sign up to further training and or health sessions."

Young footballers get stylish

THE Under-11s team at Thamesmead Town Football Club are celebrating after being given stylish new kit from their local McDonald's.

The Thamesmead restaurant donated it as part of a new McDonald's community programme, run in partnership with the FA and their official kit supplier Nike. It enables all 4,600 FA Charter Standard clubs with a junior team in England the chance to order a new strip every year for the next four seasons.

The scheme could provide up to 250,000 kits nationwide and aims to help raise the standards of grassroots football for young aspiring footballers.

To mark the occasion, Thamesmead Town FC held an event ahead of their training session, where local McDonald's franchisee and community football supporter, Taimoor Sheikh, personally delivered the kit to the team. He runs four restaurants across Woolwich and Thamesmead. Paul Turner at Thamesmead Town FC said: "We're hugely grateful to Taimoor and McDonald's for donating a new kit for our under-11s. An average team strip costs around £500 per season, so this really is a huge saving for us. The kids are all really excited about wearing it."

Civic superstar

A record 42 people representing all aspects of life in the Royal Borough of Greenwich were chosen as worthy winners in this year's Civic Awards. GREENWICH TIME reports.

SPECIAL people who have made outstanding contributions to life in the borough were publicly honoured in the third Royal Borough Civic Awards.

Presentations were made by the Mayor, Cllr Mick Hayes, at Woolwich Town Hall on Friday, March 6. More than 100 individuals, organisations and businesses had been nominated by fellow residents, giving the judges a tough challenge to decide the winners.

Categories included contributions to culture, sports and the arts, economic prosperity and public service. There were four lifetime achievement awards, and three for the biggest contribution to the success of last year's Tall Ships Festival.

The Mayor, Cllr Hayes, said: "These awards are so important because they recognise the invaluable contribution made by individuals and groups which have such a far-reaching and beneficial impact on everyone in our community. I am delighted this scheme gives us the opportunity to give public recognition where it is so rightly deserved."

Winners included Jenny and Graham Penn, who won a Contribution to the Community Award for their work with the Eaglesfield Park Neighbourhood Watch Scheme, which works with the police, volunteers and residents to tackle anti-social behaviour and crime and running a fun day every year in Eaglesfield Park. Jenny said: "Both Graham and I are delighted to receive the award. Where we live is paramount to our overall happiness. We're determined to keep our community a safe, secure and pleasant place and Neighbourhood Watch helps to achieve this. By working with service providers, social groups, and other dedicated and devoted residents we all strive to maintain an amazing community."

Another Contribution to the Community Award went to Terry Powley, Chair of the Greenwich Parks Forum, who said: "I feel honoured to receive this Civic Award. I see it as a recognition of the dedicated work that the Greenwich Parks Forum and all the individual Friends of Parks groups put into helping to safeguard the future of Greenwich's much-valued parks and open spaces."

Among those receiving a Lifetime Achievement Award was Pieter van der Merwe, who represents Her Majesty The Queen in the borough as Deputy Lieutenant for Royal Greenwich. He has played a key role at the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich for 40 years and made "an outstanding contribution to the World Heritage site." He said: "It was a very kind thought and, though a bit mystified as to the why - since I don't think I've done anything exceptional - I'm very grateful for the appreciation of whatever I have been contributing."

Local historian John Kennett was recognised for his contribution to the community, which includes founding the 50-year-old Eltham Society, writing and editing local history newsletters and books and running local history tours as well as teaching at Greenwich Community College. John, who is currently setting up a photographic archive recording change in Eltham, said: "I am very appreciative of this recognition of my contribution towards Eltham and its local history. People love to look back and be reminded and I like passing the information on to other people."

Fellow award category winner Fatta Bahadur Thapa, who runs support services for the borough's Nepalese community, said: "I am deeply honoured and proud to receive the Civic Award 2015. I feel that my work and contribution to the community is valued and recognised by the borough, which is fantastic!"

Cllr Denise Hyland, leader of the royal borough, said: "The Civic Awards provide a unique opportunity to recognise the individuals and organisations that work so hard to make Royal Greenwich a fantastic place to live, work and visit. They represent the royal borough at its very best, and without their hard work, commitment and dedication, this borough would not be the fantastic place to live and work that it is."

THE full list of winners in the different categories are:

Volunteer of the Year

Teresa Bailey and Dave King, for their work with the Gurkha Community.

Laurie Baker, for his work with Shooters Hill Working Party, Greenwich Wildlife Advisory Group and Eltham Society.

Harley Bagnall Taylor, for being an excellent volunteer at Hawksmoor Youth Club.

National praise for Woolwich youth theatre

GREENWICH Young People's Theatre received praise in the national press for its role in encouraging young people to visit the theatre.

The youth theatre group based at The Tramshed was mentioned in a recent article in The Independent newspaper.

The theatre has been part of the START programme run by The Prince's Foundation for Children and the Arts since 2012. GLYPT has funding to work with five schools over the three-year programme. Over this time teachers bring pupils twice a year to see productions at The Tramshed. They also engage with GLYPT annually in a day long workshop programme where pupils explore different art forms such as puppet making, screen printing or street dance working with industry professionals.

GLYPT spokesperson Zoe Bateman said: "Some of the productions are GLYPT's own shows, such as Robin Hood or Treasure Island, and other shows are programmed into the theatre specifically for these young audiences. GLYPT has engaged with over 1500 local pupils through this fantastic programme." She added: "More young people from START schools are engaging in our wider participatory programme. Since the beginning of the programme there has been a 74% increase in numbers of children from these schools joining GLYPT's out-of-school youth arts programme. GLYPT is currently programming a summer production and workshop programme for June and we hope that one of the legacies from this programme will be the schools coming to see GLYPT's next Christmas production of Beauty and the Beast at The Tramshed, Woolwich at the end of 2015."

Double the fun

A NEW cutting-edge exhibition created by a collective of artists is now open to residents and art-lovers in Woolwich.

The exhibition, called Doppelgänger, runs at the no format gallery, part of Second Floor Studios & Arts until March 29 and deals with a range of themes including the idea of imitation in art.

Much of Doppelgänger is inspired by the German artist Lucas Cranach the Elder, who in the 1530s developed a workshop method for making copies of paintings for different clients. Richard Bateman an artist and curator of the exhibition told GT: "Doppelgänger examines the role of the artist and 'the artist hand' in an age of mechanical reproduction, and asks us to consider whether societal notions of originality and authenticity are still possible, or if in fact they are more relevant than ever."

The Doppelgänger exhibition is running at the no format gallery Second Floor Studios & Arts Harrington Way (off Warspite Road), Woolwich SE18 5NR, Thursday-Sunday, 12-5pm until March 29.

RESIDENTS on the Progress Estate in Eltham are gearing up to celebrate their community's centenary – and they have received a letter of congratulations from Her Majesty The Queen to wish them well.

It was sent to Rita Billingham, chair of the estate's residents' association, who said: "Her Majesty sent us her good wishes and congratulations and wrote she was pleased to learn about the variety of celebration events we have planned during the year."

The association is holding a garden talk and plant sale in the Progress Hall on Saturday afternoon, March 21, when Cllr Mick Hayes, the Mayor of Royal Greenwich, will be special guest and is due to read out the letter from Her Majesty. The letter will then go on display at other events during the year.

The 1,400-home Progress Estate was built a hundred years ago to house First World War munitions workers based at the Woolwich Arsenal. Originally called the Well Hall Estate, the Progress was made a conservation area in 1975 because of its unique architecture.

Said Rita: "There are just a few families left who have been here since the estate was built."

We've put a newsletter out to every house with a questionnaire for people to tell us what they want to do to mark the centenary. We are trying to encourage community cohesion, and this is a good opportunity to bring people together. We are also running a 'good neighbour' competition at the end of April, where people can nominate neighbours who have taken

Sixth house art showcase

THE SIXTH annual Art Exhibition hosted by the Friends of Charlton House featured both relatively new and experienced artists. The event earlier this month, gave them the chance to exhibit their work, free of charge, to the public over the weekend of March 7&8. The first exhibit to hit my eye, well you could hardly miss it really, was the wonderful, colourful and vibrant work both in silk and paper of Suchin Ee which drew me over like a moth to a flame. Next were two sculptures entitled 'Trainers' (pictured below) by Judith Jeffrey which gave off a life of their own (I could just imagine the pink pair having been taken off after a hard run). Then there was 'Multi Drawing' by Brian Bath which so encapsulated me I ended up trying to find Wally in it! A wonderful piece of work which I just had to ask the artist about was Lucia Colella's 'Mortal' - a self portrait showing the artist embracing her mortality and accepting that we all pass away one day. This was then followed, quite accidentally, by 'The Art Class' going one step further than 'Mortal' (pictured above) and giving life to the skeleton in the painting.

Forty artists were displaying their work and ideas at this marvellous exhibition with proceeds from any sales going to charity. I was not only impressed but moved by the pure, innocent artistic talent and personal journeys on show and would recommend everyone to keep an eye on the Charlton House website for updates of further exhibitions.

responsible for some inventive stagings of Gilbert and Sullivan operas for which it is famed.

People on the Housing register are able to bid for all properties, regardless of their banding. You must be eligible for the size of property and bids will be considered in the following order:

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the Royal Borough of Greenwich must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free at either The Eltham or Woolwich Centre or a local library.

Royal Borough of Greenwich's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

IMPORTANT POLICY INFORMATION FOR THOSE AWARDED PRIORITY

When a priority is awarded, you will receive one offer of accommodation.

The following rules are used to allocate properties to applicants in Bands A, B and C, to make sure the Council makes best use of housing stock to meet needs.

- Two children (whatever gender) under 10 years old can share a bedroom
- Two children (same gender) under 16 years old can share a bedroom
- Two children of opposite gender where at least one is 10 years old or over need a bedroom each
- Each person over 16 years old needs their own bedroom
- A couple and lone parents need one bedroom
- Expected babies are counted as a person from the six month of pregnancy
- Band C applicants - Houses are allocated to a household with children (aged 15 or under)

Only RBG tenants who currently occupy houses in bands A and B, will be considered for rehousing to another house. All other priority applicants will be considered for flats or maisonettes.

Note: There are separate Allocations Policies for applicants with priority from regeneration areas.

Like for Like Moves

Council tenants housed through priority Bands A & B, are generally offered a similar type of property to that they currently occupy, of the size they require. This is because rehousing is being offered to meet safety or other needs, rather than to provide more desirable housing. Tenants, who want to move to improve the quality of their accommodation, must do so through Band C, where applicants are housed in date order.

For full details on our policies, please see the Allocations Scheme which is available on the Royal Borough of Greenwich website

VE street party licence fee waiver

RESIDENTS planning to hold street parties to celebrate VE Day on May 8 will have road closure fees waived in line with the council's policy. For most street parties, the council faces a charge of £790 to close roads as it has to issue a road closure notice – however, we waive this charge when the road closure is for a street party celebrating a recognised national event.

● If you're thinking of holding a street party to commemorate VE Day then go to www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/streetparties for advice and information

The Point of apprenticeships

MORE than 100 young people got information about training, apprenticeship opportunities and career advice at The Point last week.

They were among scores of young people attending events for National Apprenticeship Week which started on March 9.

Visitors were able to hear from a wide range of organisations present including the royal borough's local labour and business service (GLLaB), skills for growth and JobCentre Plus Woolwich.

The Point is a youth support service which ensures that young people in the royal borough get the advice and direction they need. Guidance on a wide range of issues is available, from education, training and employment, to sexual health services and drug and alcohol support.

One person involved with the Point is Marcus Murray from Greenwich, who is undertaking training with the Centre for Leadership and Management Development. He told GT: "I have been working with the Point for two years since I was 16. I want to get into a business administration role. The training I am doing at the moment will allow me to develop those skills and work my way up the career ladder."

Daile Clark from Greenwich is currently doing an apprenticeship in youth work at The Point, explained about her experiences. She said: "My apprenticeship started in August and I have been involved with youth provision inspections in the borough.

"They have helped me with getting my current apprenticeship, prepping me for the interview and helping me with what to wear. Part of my role as an apprentice today has been to assist in the organising of National Apprenticeship Week

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for children and young people told GT: "The Point continues to engage with both young people and partners to make sure that there is access to youth support services. I must thank all the volunteers and staff involved for their hard work organising the event to mark National Apprenticeship Week.

"The Point offers so much in the way of accessible information and advice and I encourage young people across the royal borough to have a look at the wide range of services it offers and see if they could benefit." Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for children's services told GT: "The Point continues to engage with both young people and partners to make sure that there is access to youth support services. I must thank all the volunteers and staff involved for their hard work organising the event to mark National Apprenticeship Week.

"The Point offers so much in the way of accessible information and advice and I encourage young people across the royal borough to have a look at the wide range of services it offers and see if they could benefit."

Dive in with Poolpods

THREE more Poolpods are set to be installed at swimming pools across the borough.

Two are already in use in the main pool and spa pool at the Eltham Centre.

Charlton Lido and Lifestyle Club, Thamesmere Leisure Centre and the new Greenwich Centre are all set to have one by summer 2015.

The innovative equipment, allows for the user to enter the pool on foot or on a specially designed submersible wheelchair.

They were introduced after a consultation aimed at potential users in disabled swimming groups and over-55 clubs, which revealed the need for alternatives to conventional hoists used previously.

The new Poolpods are designed to improve accessibility to the pool. Swimmers can independently transfer to the wheelchair in the changing room rather than using a conventional hoist which requires assistance on the poolside.

It can also be controlled by a wristband so it can be used without a member of staff to operate it.

Funded by the London Marathon Charitable Trust (LMCT), GLL and the royal borough as part of its Olympic and Paralympic Legacy Programme, the pods were originally piloted at the Aquatic Centre at the Queen Elizabeth Park.

Cllr Miranda Williams, the royal borough's cabinet member for culture and creative industries told GT: "I'm delighted that these new Pool Pods are set to be available in five of our top leisure centres, giving residents with disabilities increased access, privacy and independence."

"The royal borough is committed to helping residents of all backgrounds increase their physical activity and to reducing potential barriers to participation that may hinder them. Increasing opportunities for disabled residents to use our facilities is a key priority for us".
